Following this conversation I discussed this matter with [REDACTED] and returned [REDACTED] telephone call to the following effect: That while these individuals were not the personnel that we desired in our Filing Section, this arrangement would be workable, and, in order to enable him to get the [REDACTED] Daily Reports delivered on schedule, I would agree to this arrangement. However, I pointed out to him that [REDACTED] who would be transferred to the Services Branch under this arrangement, was a very valuable employee to us in the Filing Section, and we would like to have him returned to [REDACTED] at a later date if a suitable replacement for him could be found. To this [REDACTED] agreed.

It was mutually agreed that [REDACTED] should proceed with the transfer of personnel on this basis. It was, however, also pointed out to [REDACTED] that [REDACTED] had no place to assign either [REDACTED] or [REDACTED] and that I assumed the Personnel Branch would find some suitable position for them.
